The UW MIA Recovery and Identification Project: Bringing Missing Service Members Home
Since 2016, the UW MIA Recovery and Identification Project has been working in Partnership with the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency (DPRAA) to identify, recover, and repatriate the remains of service members lost during WWII. The project combines archeological, forensic, and historical research methods to conduct recovery missions in western Europe. This multi-disciplinary approach provides students and volunteers with valuable fieldwork, service, and leadership experiences, and helps fulfill our Nation’s promise to bring all of our missing service members home. Dr. Jamison will discuss his experiences serving as the lead archaeologist on the project, including reflections on methods, challenges, successes, and some of the project’s future goals.

Speaker: Gregg Jamison, Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the UW-Milwaukee at Waukesha
Date: Thursday, March 26
Time: 7:30 PM
Location: Student Union, Room 3310, UWL

2020 Annual Awards and Lecture: The Kensington Runestone and Golf Balls on the Moon
In 1989, Olaf Ohman, a Swedish immigrant farmer, claimed he discovered a stone covered with Norse runes letters on his farm near Kensington, Minnesota. His discovery didn’t get much attention until Hjalmar Holand, a Wisconsin historian interested in Scandinavian immigration, promoted it as an authentic relic dating to 1362. In the early 21st century, the Runestone found new champions in Scott Wolter, the president of a cement testing company in Minneapolis, and Richard Nielsen, a Texas engineer. The authenticity of the Kensington stone continues to be debated, although interest in the stone has once again waned as Wolter has moved on to reality TV stardom and Nielsom has died. Arguments for and against the Kensington Runestone will be presented in the contexts of archaeology, history, linguistics, geography, pseudoscience, common sense, and Scandinavian humor.

Speaker: Scott Anfinson, author and former Minnesota State Archaeologist
Date: Thursday, October 29
Time: Social 6:30 PM, Awards 7 PM, Lecture 7:30 PM
Location: Student Union, Room 3310, UWL
